

New Yorkers For A Day

Ex-Gov. Tener of Pennsylvania, Once Head of National League, Has Transferred Affections to Golf, Game of Men Growing Old; Our Leading Public Men Are Playing It and It Is Becoming More Popular Every Day; Baseball Is Game of Youth and Not Losing Its Popularity.

"I have turned to golf," admitted John K. Tener, former National League President and ex-Governor of Pennsylvania, when seen at the Biltmore to-day. Tener was a diamond star in his youth and later went into the banking business in Charleroi, Pa. Now he is just a "business man."

It all came about when Mr. Tener, standing in the lobby, reached in his pocket and idly brought out a golf ball. "So that's what you are pitching to-day?" suggested the reporter. "Yes," he said. "That's my game to-day. More and more people are turning to golf every year in this country. Baseball is the real game, but it is the game of youth; when we get old golf is the game for us."

As he stood there smiling and looking particularly rugged, one doubted that he was really getting old. "Yes," he went on, "baseball will always be our national game and it is growing in popularity every day. But all our leading men are playing golf, the President, Governors, statesmen. Lots of money is being spent for golf outfits and for links. There is nothing disturbing for the golfer. There are no bad umpires, no fans who go home unhappy when you strike out, no shouting or distraction."

there is a sprinkling from the South.

Lewis E. Emery, ex-Senator from Pennsylvania and a former colleague of Senator Penrose, has returned to New York after a spell of globe-trotting. He is eighty-two years old, yet he often visits his mining interests in the mountains of Peru.

"Twenty years ago," he declared at the Commodore yesterday, "I took up some mining property in the Andes. It was very remote, and can now be reached only by wagon road. This we have built ourselves, at a cost of more than a million dollars. It runs criss-cross, up and down the mountains, and at one point descends 3,000 feet in three miles."

The only means of transportation is the lowly mule, and we have many experiences taking travellers across the mountains on our road. Three volcanoes, long thought extinct, have recently shown signs of life, and sulphurous gases sometimes hang over the trail. The traveller becomes affected by the rarefied air and gas, and suddenly wants to jump from the mule. At that time one of the drivers tells him to wait a minute, goes in back and straps the person to the saddle. Then the man gets mad, talks about being forcibly detained and tells of the complaints he is going to make—but forgets all about the rarefied air and the gas. By this little trick many persons are saved who otherwise might become panic-stricken and choke."

Senator Emery is going to his home in Bradford, Pa., for a brief rest before starting out again for Peru.

Carthage—not the Carthage which some one said ought to be destroyed—but the Carthage which is east of Watertown, N. Y., has a Chamber of Commerce which is so progressive that women have asked to have an equal part in its activities. Fred Shipman, a salesman, who is at the Murray Hill, says that at a recent meeting the following edict was issued:

"Woman has been told continually that her place was in the home. And to a degree, of course, it is. It is her chief interest. She wants to see it prosper. She wants her children to have those things which will enable them to grow up into creditable manhood and womanhood. Woman is better qualified than man to determine what her children need in the way of opportunities and protection. Women should be on a par with men."

Did the women of Carthage get equal rights in the Chamber of Commerce? They did.

HERE'S ONE FROM NEBRASKA.

"We were having a foursome on one of the Western links," said J. M. Watson of Lincoln, at the Biltmore. "and my partner was a prominent Chicago business man. He explained that he must hurry, as his wife's alister, whom he had not seen since she was a girl, would be at the club for luncheon. We played the nine-hole course and started around again, as we had made good time. On the third hole a young woman was having a terrible time not far from the tee. We waited for several minutes; then my partner cried out and asked her to let us through. She took her time, however, and we were delayed several minutes more.

"We met her at the next tee, and my partner made a remark which she overheard. She glared, but said nothing."

"About noon we went to the club house, and shortly afterward my partner's wife appeared. 'I want you to meet Ruth,' she said. Well, along came Ruth. She was the lady whom we had met on the links. The rest of us pleaded pressing engagements and left my partner to do the explaining."

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., June 1.—A gift of $100,000 from the General Education Board of New York, announced to-day by President Alderman, brought the centennial endowment fund of the University of Virginia up to $1,200,000.
